Guidelines on Concentration Selection

A. About double concentrations

The BA Faculty encourages its most capable students to take two concentrations. This helps to differentiate an individual by providing them with a wider scope of knowledge and information. It also highlights one's time management and ability to comprehend different fields of expertise. Students who do double concentrations come out with a highly competitive edge.

To successfully manage double concentrations, you should note several critical considerations. Planning your coming years of study carefully will help you make sure that are maximizing the time you spend here. The following guidelines will help you in your decision-making.

B. Selecting a concentration

1. Interest – Are you eager to acquire more knowledge in this concentration?
2. Ability – Are you confident in your abilities to excel in this concentration?
3. Career aspirations – Are you planning to pursue a career related to this concentration?
4. Future development – Does this concentration align with your future career and personal development plans?
5. Personal commitment/responsibility – Will you be able to commit the effort to excel in this concentration? Will you be able to face problems that you may encounter?

C. Reasons to take a single concentration

1. You do not find a second subject that interests you.
2. You plan to spend a significant portion of your time in various extracurricular activities.
3. You are heavily engaged in a personal commitment.
4. You are doing a minor programme.
5. You have been admitted to or plan to participate in the Leadership Development Programme.
6. You would find it too challenging to manage your time.

D. Who should take double concentrations?

1. You are highly competitive.
2. You plan and organize your time well.
3. You have a strong interest in learning about another field.
4. You have clear personal study objectives/plan and are very sure of the path that you want to take.
5. You are not having difficulty in handling your current course load.
6. Your previous term(s) academic results are strong.

E. Important points to note

1. Students should refer to the study scheme of their admission years for the requirements of concentrations. The study scheme can be found at http://rgsntl.rgs.cuhk.edu.hk/aqs_prd_applx/Public/tt_dsp_acad_prog.aspx.
2. One course cannot be used to fulfill the requirements of two concentration areas except for specific courses as stipulated in the explanatory notes of the study scheme.
3. Students are allowed to claim exemption of up to two courses within each declared concentration area based on those course(s) completed during overseas exchange.
4. If students do not declare their concentration under CUSIS during their graduation term, the Registration and Examination Section (RES) will be unable to perform the graduation check for the fulfilment of graduation requirements.

F. Planning for success

1. Due to the limitations of timetable scheduling, there may be a higher possibility of clashing schedules between courses across different concentration areas. Enrollment in courses for any concentration areas will NOT be guaranteed. Taking concentration courses starting from Year 2 is highly recommended.
2. Prerequisites required for advanced courses should be carefully identified.
